CHAIRPERSON'S REPORT

Chairwoman Coplen stated that when the budget was approved it was a budget to allow breathing space. We are not going to jump into new projects other than what we were already committed to, unless something unexpected comes up that needs acted on. She suggested not reviewing the budget until after the first quarter of the year has passed. If she is pressed on the Barnitz Mill matter, she will look at the three options, but she is leaning towards the option to bring down the mill to the foundation, but prefers waiting until the end of March to allow time to think about it. When the new tax was voted in, the commitment was made for no new expenses or projects at least for a year and she wants to stay with that.
